Information Security & New Media Practices for Activists

10:00 AM- 4:00 PM, UP Balay Kalinaw

The skills sharing seminar features experiences of activists in Tunisia, Egypt, Libya, and other Middle Eastern countries in their creative use of technology to support popular uprisings. There will be discussions on how computers, networks, internet and social networks significantly contributed to the current struggles of the people around the world for rights and freedom, people's welfare over the global environmental and economic crises.

These events are part of International Festival for Peoples' Rights and Struggles (IFPRIS) which will run from July 2- 6, 2011 at the University of the Philippines Diliman.

The IFPRS is a space for peoples from Asia and the Pacific, Africa, North America, Europe and Latin America and the Middle East to share and learn from each other about new and longstanding threats to people's individual and collective rights. It is an occasion to draw lessons from and celebrate the victories of people's struggles to claim and assert their rights.
